Annual 1966-67

1 February 1967

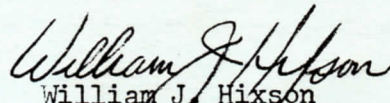

Greetings Fellow Reservists:

Thirteen months have passed since the deactivation of the 63rd Infantry Division, one of the finest Reserve Combat Divisions that ever existed in the United States Army.

In the past year I have met many former 63rd Infantry Division personnel, enlisted men and officers, under a variety of circumstances, during both inactive and active duty periods. Most expressed a wish that they were once again a member of the old Division where the requirements were often quite tough, but the individual had a feeling of belonging to an organization with a mission, through which he developed a personal sense of responsibility and accomplishment. Needless to say I became increasingly proud of my association with the Division.

Despite memories and wishes, however, our obligation is to the present and future. Time and Regulations take their toll. As the months pass, many of us will no longer be active participants in the Reserve Program. It is our duty to make certain that those who follow develop into competent and conscientious Reservists--true Citizen Soldiers. In each of our major wars, including the present one, the 'Non-Professional' has been in the majority in our active forces. Today, as in many past years, Army Reserve Officers outnumber their career counterparts on active duty.

Best wishes to all former members of the 63rd.

William J. Hixson
Major General, USAR

63rd DIVISION REUNION

'Blood and Fire' Unit's Veterans Meet Here

By WARREN HOGUE
Star Staff Writer

In the first weeks of the bleak wartime year of 1943, a fastidious, silk-shirted general named Louis Hibbs was given command of a division of draftees and ordered to train them for combat in a dreary camp in Mississippi.

Hibbs—built like a fireplug but known as an officer with an eye for fate—was hard-pressed to grow the glimmer of esprit de corps in the smoke-filled fields of the campsite.

Then in a statement of Winston Churchill, he discovered the dash that was to carry his 63rd Division through the formidable Siegfried line in Germany and bring them back together each year after the war in reunion, as they are this weekend at the Washington Hilton.

From Churchill's wartime promise to make the money "blood and tears," the division took its emblem, a bloody dagger against a background of Sickinghams, and the legend, "Blood and Fire."

Then Hibbs sent a courier to the Casablanca conference of allied heads of state with orders not to return until the new emblem bore the signatures of the conference principals. Days later the ponderous standard was unfurled in a glass case in the Mississippi log, under round-the-clock guard at Hibbs' order in the following years, it accompanied the division through its European campaign.

Since then, the emblem—bearing among its 19 signatures of Churchill, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Chief of Command Operations Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten—has rested in the National Archives.

At the unit's reunion banquet tonight, replicas of the neglected document will be passed out by the convention chairman, John Graves of 1385 New Hampshire Ave., N.W. who traced the standard to the Archives last October and arranged for its reproduction.

The unit also will make a presentation to Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who, as a lieutenant colonel, was Gen. Hibbs' chief aide with the Blood and Fire Division during the war.

The gathering of an estimated 300 former members of the 63rd is one of four similar reunions this weekend in Washington.

Meeting at the Sheraton is the 9th Infantry Division Association, at the Sheraton Park the 319th Infantry Regiment and the 79th Division Association and at the Rader Hilton the 5th Infantry Division Association.

Though labeled conventions, the meetings make little pretension at passing resolutions.

"We're here to swing," said Graves in a Hilton hallway filled with delegates sharing GI humor and horseshy.

Set First Reunion for 63rd Infantry Division Saturday

The first reunion of the 63rd Infantry Division is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Hollywood Palladium.

The honored guests will be Maj. Gen. William J. Hixson, Brig. Gen. Stewart L. Hall, and Brig. Gen. Louis Kaufman. The 63rd Infantry Division commanders of brigades, battalions and companies also will be honored.

The expected attendance for the dinner-dance will be 300 officers and their ladies. The reunion committee is made up of the following officers of the former 63rd Brig. Gen. Louis Kaufman, Lt. Col. Milton Bremer, Lt. Col. Irving Myers, Chairman, Lt. Col. Noel Pattinson, Maj. Michael Schirm and Maj. Dale Swanson. For information telephone the committee chairman at 621-0211 days, or 780-7800 evenings.

16 May 1966

Dear Pat:

I wish you would convey to all the members of the 63d Infantry Division Association Council my deep appreciation for the perfectly beautiful pen set presented to me at the Dinner Dance Saturday night. Its design is most appropriate, and the wood and color are a perfect match for my office desk. Needless to add, it has already created much comment and I assure you it will always be one of my most prized possessions.

I thought the dinner and dance were beautifully done too. The flower pieces, corsages, place cards and all were most thoughtful and thoroughly delightful. For me, of course, having retired, it was probably more significant than for the other General Officers, and I assure you I shall remember the event with some nostalgia and a great deal of pleasure.

Most cordially,

Stew

Dear Pat,

Mrs Kaufman and I would like to thank you, the governing board, and the Officers of the 63d Officers Association for the fine reception and party at the Hollywood Palladium.

The Pen Set, a fine piece of craftsmanship, presented to me at the party will always be cherished. It will be a warm reminder of the staunch friends I have made and the goals we achieved when we served in the 63d Infantry Division.

I would like at this time to commend you for the fine job you personally have done.

Sincerely,

Louis Kaufman
